United Way of the Midlands to Host A Concert & Conversation with Peter Buffett on April 11

United Way of the Midlands is hosting A Concert & Conversation with Peter Buffett at the UNO Strauss Performing Arts Center on April 11. Peter, son of investor Warren Buffett, currently serves as the co-president of the NoVo Foundation. He has an acclaimed career as an Emmy Award-winning musician, composer, philanthropist and author.

During A Concert & Conversation, Peter will share stories about growing up in the Buffett family, his personal views on complex social issues and the important role of philanthropy. He seeks to inspire business leaders, philanthropists and young people in attendance to become further involved in their local communities and create lasting change.

“We’re so honored to host Peter Buffett and his family here in Omaha,” said Shawna Forsberg, president and CEO of United Way of the Midlands. “We can all learn from Peter and his message of compassion, connection and community.”

The concert is part of a cross-country partnership between Peter Buffett and United Way Worldwide to ignite new thinking and energy around community issues. While United Way has years of experience galvanizing people and organizations to find solutions to the toughest problems, there is potential to engage more individuals. Issues affecting women and children, equity and inclusion are especially important to Peter.

“I’m thrilled to be bringing my Concert and Conversation to my hometown,” Peter said. “Nowhere else can I more deeply underscore the value of community and connection than Omaha.”
